Numb. 717.

So. Carolina THE GAZETTE.

Containing the freshest Advices, Foreign and Domestick.

From WEDNESDAY January 6th, to MONDAY January 11th, 1748.

From the Camp of the Allies at Ussoon, Sept. 8.

WE are at present on the very Point of entering Dauphiny by three different Routs. General Wentworth who attends his Sardinian Majesty, after a long Conference with that Prince, dispatched a Courier two Days ago to London, with Letters of great Importance. The Point is not yet absolutely settled, in what Manner our Troops are to proceed. The Day before Yesterday a Council of War was held upon this Subject, in which the Piedmontese agreed that there were Troops enough, and even more than enough for this Expedition; but they apprehended that in an Enemy's Country, and at this Season of the Year, it might be difficult to secure Subsistance. The Austrian Officers on the other Hand were very clear, that it is practicable to force an immediate Passage into the fine Plain of Ambrun, where the Army might be easily supplied by Contributions, and that it would be by no Means impracticable to render the Roads passable for Convoys, before the Fall of the Snows. We know not absolutely what Resolution was taken in that Council of War, but it appears plainly enough by our Dispositions, that the Invasion will go on, and that we shall take Winter-Quarters at the Expence of the French.

Florence, Sept. 9. General Nadasti has published a sort of Manifesto, whereby he exhorts the People of Genoa to lay down their Arms, and to accept of the Pardon which he has offered them; threatening them with Fire and Sword in Case of Refusal. The English have resolved to burn all the little Vessels without Exception, laden with Provisions for Genoa; they have already executed this Resolution upon two that they have taken.

Paris, Sept. 11. We have lately had a good deal of ill News here, which however is concealed as much as it is possible. There was an Insurrection on the 27th at Lyons, occasioned by the Dearness of Bread, which is said to have been suppressed before it came to any Height, but that is a little uncertain. On the other Hand, a most dangerous Conspiracy has been discovered at Rochelle, for betraying that important Port to the English, upon which great Numbers of Persons, and some of Distinction, have been apprehended, and it is said, will be severely punished.

Berne, Sept. 13. There has been a Report here for some Days, the Rise of which is not yet known, nor has it been confirmed by latter Advices, that the Imperialists and Piedmontese have entered Dauphiny, by three different Ways, without meeting any Resistance from the French, and that the first and principal Column made its Way by the Valley of Argentiera, which leads thro' a fine Plain to Ambrun. Those who persist in spreading this News, add, that the Body of French Troops which were in the Neighbourhood of of Mount Genevre, seeing their Communication by this Means cut off, had a great deal of Difficulty, by a very large Circuit, to join the Army of Marshal Belleisle, who is said to be still very much indisposed. It will not be long before we know the Truth of all this, and if these Circumstances are true, 'tis probable that M. de Leutrum will not delay acting on his side, his Motions in a great Measure depending on those of the King of Sardinia's Army.

Paris, Sept. 18. They write from Nice of the 10th, that the King of Sardinia having formed a Project to attack our Entrenchments near Villa-franca, had sent a considerable Body of Troops thither; but that they had been repulsed, and that we had some Soldiers killed and wounded on that Occasion. It's added, that the Duke de Richlieu was arrived there, and that the Marquis de Mirepoix was expected there the 12th.

Hanau, Sept. 18. We have Advice from Cassel, that the Princess Mary of Great-Britain, Consort of Prince Frederick of Hesse, was delivered of a 3d Son on the 11th Instant.

An Extract of a Letter from Rotterdam, dated Sept. 18.

'Our Surprize was so great, when told Yesterday Morning by 'People that fled out of Bergen, that the Town was taken, 'twas 'not to be express'd; and when the People declared they saw the 'French in the Town, 'twas not believ'd till several Persons had 'been at the Hague, and had it from the Prince's own Mouth, 'that it was taken on Saturday Morning at Six o'Clock, by Sur'prize, or rather Treachery, Sword in Hand. The French came 'chiefly in at the Bas Port, where they met with little or no 'Resistance. The Slaughter in the Town was very great; Prince 'Hesse Philipsthal is wounded, General Cronstrom is safe, with 'so many of our Forces as could get off; some went to Tholen, 'and others to Steenberg, and were in the greatest Confusion: 'This is to be depended on, and I have sent it Express to Hel'voetsluys, in order to catch the Packet. I am struck to the 'Soul, to think that the Blood and Treasure of England should 'be spent to serve and save an ungrateful Set of People. Till our 'Prince is faster riveted, and can weed out Bribery, Things will 'not go better than they have done.

'P.S. If I hear any Thing worth your Notice, you shall have 'a Line To-morrow with the Post.'

Another Extract of a Letter from Rotterdam, Sept. 20.

'As I promised in mine of Yesterday I therefore write, but as to 'Particulars we have few more than those we learn from common 'Report: It is dismal to see the wounded that have fled here, 'both Women and Children, with Part of the Burghers; some 'came out naked, their Consternation was so great; but all say, 'they thought themselves in the greatest Security: That at Break 'of Day the French got into the Ravelin Dedam without much 'Opposition; that the reserved Corps behind the Ravelin made 'some small Resistance, but were soon overcome: Then the 'French drove through the Sortee, or Sally Port; and before the 'Garison was alert, three thousand of the former were got toge'ther in greatest Hurry and Confusion; they defended themselves 'till near Eight o'Clock; but the French pouring in from all Parts, 'they were forced to retire towards the Steenberg Port, fighting as 'they went for Fear of having their Retreat cut off. The Massa'cre was terrible, the French sparing neither Women nor Chil'dren: The Troops in the Lines had not Time to come to their 'Assistance; all marched off in Confusion, some got with the poor 'remaining Part of the Garison to Tolen, and some to Steenberg; 'and thus, as it is generally believed, by Treachery was the brave 'Garison sacrificed, after defending the Town nine Weeks. 'Those People that wish well to the French tell us, the City was 'taken fairly by Storm; that they entered in at four Breaches they 'had made: which, had that had been the Case, the Garison 'would have been on their Guard, and the Troops from the Lines 'would have been in Readiness. Prince Hesse Philipsthal arrived 'here last Night, is wounded in several Parts of the Body, and 'shot through the Leg; it's said he behaved most gallantly; 'but when told the French were in the Town, laughed, and said 'it was not possible. General Cronstrom was carried off by a 'Party of our Hussars, and is safe. It is said by all Well-Wishers 'to their Country, that there was Treachery, but by whom I can'not say. On Sunday the Prince appeased the People, by telling 'them it was taken by Surprize. They now begin to say he is be'trayed in his Counsels; that those about him have governed too 'long. In short, they are for giving him all the Power into his own own Hands. On the other Hand, ſome of the Papiſts have ſhewn themſelves too much pleaſed. An Houſe of one was pulled down at the Hague Yeſterday, and three at Amſterdam, and all their Furniture burnt. In ſhort the People begin to be ſo outrageous, that terrible are the Conſequences that are to be expected; the Enemy at our Doors, and the People diſtracted. I ſee no Way left but to drown ourſelves to keep our Throats from being cut. We are told the Dykes by Williamſtadt are cut, in order to prevent their coming that Way. This is the Fruit of preferring our mortal Enemy before our faſt Friend, which muſt be the Effect of Bribery; but as a Dutchman prefers Money before his God, the French will never want any Thing they ſtand in need of, ſo long as they can find Money. Some Weeks ſince Placarts were publiſhed, prohibiting Proviſions going to Flanders. Laſt Week another, ſetting forth, that the People there ſhould not ſtarve, that no Body would like it themſelves, and therefore Liberty was given to ſend any Thing, being firſt examined by the Cuſtom-Houſe Officers; but every one knows 'tis an eaſy Matter in this Country, to tranſport one Thing for another; Gunpowder may paſs for Butter, and Balls for Edam Cheeſes. The Country is in a terrible Situation; we may thank God the Winter is near at hand, which may probably ſtop the French making any farther Progreſs towards us, and before Spring we may determine to be in earneſt.

My Wife is gone to Amſterdam; ſhe was moſt terribly frighted, when told the Blood ran in Streams through the Streets of Bergen; if this be the Treatment the Friends of France meet with, what muſt their Enemies expect? damn'd perfidious Nation!

CHARLES-TOWN, January 11.

The Frederica Privateers arrived off this Bar laſt Wedneſday from Edifts, and ſail'd again the next Day, to cruize.

On Friday laſt the Nonpareil and Pearl (the two Sloops that were taken into the Government's Service to protect the Trade) ſail'd on a Cruize, and at the ſame took ſome outward-bound Veſſels under their Convoy; and in about 4 Hours after they had ſail'd, they took a ſmall Spaniſh Privateer Schooner (that bore down on the Fleet) of 2 Carriage Guns, 6 Swivels, and 25 Men, which is juſt now arrived.

The Brigt. Yucatan, Andrew Knox Maſter, who ſail'd from this Port the 15th of November laſt, bound for Boſton, having met with a violent Storm off Martha's Vineyard, was obliged to put back in a very ſhatter'd Condition, and on Monday laſt arrived off this Bar, when he had the Misfortune to be taken by the Schooner above-mentioned.

By a Veſſel juſt arrived from St. Auguſtine, we hear, that the Spaniſh Privateer Brigt. which lately cruiz'd off this Bar, is loſt near the Bar of that Place.
